Some Inconsistencies.

Let us reason together for a few noments. If it is a fact, as Congressman Vandiver stated in an address at Moore's Theatre Saturday night, that Mr. Folk could not stultify himself in 1902 by voting for James J. Butler as a candidate for congress on the Democratic ticket, how was it that Mr. Folk while he was himself a candidate for circuit attorney in 1900, could make speeches from the same platform with Mr. Butler, and could and did vote for the same Mr. Butler, at the election? What did James J. Butler do between the campaigns of 1900 and 1902 to disqualify himself for the same position for which Mr. Folk had voted for him two years before? If he was a bad man in 1902, is it not true that he was equally as bad a man in 1900 when he and Mr. Folk spoke together from the same platformin the interest of the candidacy of each other-and they linked hands, marched to the polls and voted together? Then again. If it is
